Playing your opponent on a string like a puppet master, if you will. And so, without further ado, I bring you How Not to Get Hit□s patented three rules of pain. One □ the brain can only process (give or take) seven things at any one time. If you provide more than seven signals, or stimuli, when defending yourself (a series of relatively hard & committed strikes, slaps, or pushes will do) to as many targets as you can get to, it will become increasingly hard for your opponent to respond.
