Capita a tutti di perdersi, prima o poi. Capita a tutti di sentirsi incompresi e di non sapere bene quale strada scegliere. Insomma, capita a tutti di non sapere proprio cosa fare. Vorremmo che qualcuno ci consigliasse, che accendesse una luce per farci vedere dove andare. A volte i suggerimenti arrivano in maniera inaspettata e molto insolita, così insolita che da principio si fatica a crederci. Però, se ascoltiamo bene, sembra che dicano proprio quello che serve a noi. Un favola, ma forse una storia vera, un racconto per ragazzi che piace agli adulti. Patrizia Emilietri ci incanta con un bosco che tutti abbiamo attraversato.

The spiling that for many are a closed road, for others are the starting point, these wooden xylophones creak, give everyone the opportunity to stand with their feet dangling regardless of the number of shoes. The more we advance along these piers, the more the wind blows, the more we walk, we sometimes get so close that we have to share our breath with the crossed people They suspend us on the water and are never long enough to go and seek advice from the lake up close, or to pour our thoughts directly into his heart and leave them so that they take care of them, but above all they have a great role, that of give shade to the water that alternates to go under and rest. Manuel Malo
