"Open regionalism" has been adopted as a fundamental principle of the Asia Pacific Economic Cooperation (APEC) 2 organization from its creation in 1989. The 18 nations of APEC account for about one half of world output and world trade. The institution includes the three largest economies in the world - the United States, Japan and China.

Regionalism” was the term that came to describe Asia Pacific economic cooperation and the approach to trade facilitation and liberalisation in the late 1980s and 1990s. It emerged from early Asia Pacific discussion of regional trade

~~A NEW OPEN REGIONALISM~~

Regionalism must not lead to protectionist blocs—a “fortress Asia” is no more desirable than a “fortress Europe” or a “fortress North America” would be. But the open, outward-oriented regionalism that is emerging in Asia can avoid posing such a threat.

Open Regionalism is regional economic co-operation without discrimination against countries outside the region. The concept grew from the experience of rapid growth, and expanding trade and investment across national borders, in East Asia and the Pacific. It became the guiding idea of Asia-Pacific Economic Co-operation.

The Asia-Pacific Economic Cooperation (APEC), which was established as a mechanism to foster the creation of a free-trade area, is a good example of loose regionalism, and NAFTA, as a full-fledged free-trade area that falls short of being an economic union, exemplifies a category intermediate between tight and loose regionalism.

Regionalism And The Asia

Both in the Asia Pacific region and in Latin America, considerable confusion surrounds the concept of 'open regionalism' and casts doubt on its relevance for practical purposes. This study surveys the literature on the subject.

Deepening regionalism in Asia demands new leadership. Strong elites who are committed to a supranational identity are a minimum requirement of successful regionalism. Regional leaders are increasingly seen as a new set of leaders in Europe. Currently, Asian regional leaders largely come from the diplomacy community, or trade and economic sectors. Yet further regionalization demands a new type of leadership from civil society and citizens. In this context it is important to cultivate new regional leadership through the development of regional citizenship. This book examines contested ideas of regionalism in Asia with a particular focus on two competing ideas of pan-Asianism and Pacificism. It also identifies a new trend and contestation, the fundamental shift from a civilization understanding of regionalism to a technocratic and functional understanding of regionalism in the form of regulatory regionalism. It also examines the

Other contested imaginations of regionalism in Asia including elitist versus participatory approaches to regionalism, and democracy-centric versus nationalism-centric approaches to regionalism.

This book is the first in a major new series examining Global Economic Institutions and contrasts regional economic integration in the Asia Pacific Region and in Europe. In the Asia Pacific Region, regionalism is developing by means of "open regionalism", which is different from the regionalism which has developed in Europe, through the construction of a single European Market and Monetary Union within the European Union. In the
