Homer. Homer is the name given to the author of Greece's earliest surviving poetry, two epic poems based on the myth of the Trojan War, the Iliad and the Odyssey, and a collection of hymns sung in honour of a number of the Olympian gods. We cannot say for sure when Homer lived or in which Greek city he was born, and the two epic poems are probably the result of a long collaboration and tradition in oral poetry, and were likely never written down in his lifetime, possibly only published in ...
